

BOLON LAUNCHES A NEW FLOORING COLLECTION DESIGNED BY PRITZKER PRIZE-WINNING ARCHITECT JEAN NOUVEL

Swedish design company Bolon will unveil its latest collaboration – a flooring concept designed by Pritzker Prize-winning French architect Jean Nouvel – at the architect’s upcoming retrospective exhibition at Musée des Arts Décoratifs in Paris.

With its clean material expression and flexible application, the collection Bolon by Jean Nouvel Design is an architect-driven flooring concept comprised of six colour signatures. A departure from Bolon’s typically designer-driven flooring, this architectural edition was conceived with spatiality in mind. The result is a flooring with a textural, hand-woven effect created of woven vinyl in combinations of black, grey, red and blue.

“The freedom is yours to use the flooring to play with color and light, and engage the windows of the space,” says Jean Nouvel. “It is not a decorative carpet, but an architectural floor.”

Jean Nouvel came to prominence in the 1980s, with groundbreaking projects like the Cartier Foundation for Contemporary Art in Paris and the Cultural and Conference Center in Lucerne, Switzerland. World-class projects followed, establishing Nouvel as one of the great architects of the century, and in 2008, he was awarded the coveted Pritzker Prize.

“Jean is not a designer – he is first and foremost an architect. He began the project by assessing the space, and suiting the flooring to the spatial needs of the project”, Annica Eklund CEO at Bolon explains.

This collaboration marks Bolon’s first ever architect-driven flooring concept and directly addresses the concerns of architects in its concept and execution. Color panes make it possible to have complete control and flexibility within the interior. The flooring amplifies the interior geometry, making it possible to experiment with the layout and the natural circulation within an interior space.
